Hearing in the Case of Carlyle Harris Is Ended.

Commissioner Raines Will Report to the Governor Monday.

Drug Clerk Lettett's Testimony Gets Some Severe Blows.

The fourth and last day of the taking of additional testimony in the case of Carlyle W. Harris, the condemned wife-poisoner, opened this morning before Special Commissioner Raines in Part III. of the General Sessions with counsel on both sides determined to complete the testimony as speedily as possible.

Assistant District Attorney Wellman, for the people, and Lawyer William F. Howe, for Harris, found considerable matter to think over that was brought out at the hearing yesterday.

The testimony of Miss Lead, the associate principal of the convent school, at which Helen Potts was a student, giving a conversation with the unfortunate girl about the taking of a drug to make her sleep the night of Jan. 31, 1891, was a decided surprise to Mr. Howe, who failed to shake this very damning testimony.

On the other hand, the most positive and direct testimony given by Drug Clerk Lettett, who was present, and who had been in the store at about 20 minutes in the afternoon, was rather unconvincing.

When the court-room was thrown open this morning a crowd of spectators was on hand waiting to be admitted.

Lawyer Howe and Mrs. Harris were in court before 11 o'clock this morning, as well as Mr. George Potts, the father of Helen Potts, Commissioner Raines came at 11:10 o'clock with three big law books under his arm.

There was some delay on account of the absence of Mr. Wellman, although his assistant, Mr. Butler, was present. The hearing was continued without Mr. Wellman at 11 o'clock.

Joseph H. Van Nater, the owner of a drug store at Astor Park, was called by Mr. Butler.

In the summer of 1890 he owned a drug store at Astor Park and had in his employ Clerk Joseph Lettett. The store was opened in June and closed in September. The chief sales in September were cigars, although he sold some drugs.

At no time had he ever had over two dollars of morphine in the store, and he always maintained strict rules about its sale. He directed Clerk Lettett never to sell the drug without a prescription, but Lettett declared that there was no New Jersey law prohibiting or restricting its sale.

The witness was positive that Lettett never sold three or four drams of morphine to Helen Potts, as testified by the other witnesses.

The character of Lettett, the witness said, was bad, although he was his nephew.

Mr. Howe cross-examined the witness. He read a copy of an invoice of goods bought by the witness from a New York drug house, which showed a large quantity of morphine pills and opium and powders. The witness said he had purchased the goods, but it was late when he opened the store at Astor Park.

He never kept any books, and was in doubt whether the store was open Oct. 15.

Commissioner Raines then questioned the witness about the inventory of stock of the drug store taken by Clerk Lettett at the close of the season in 1890. The book showed a half dram of sulphur and a half dram of opium and a half dram of morphine.

Mr. Lettett said he had removed some of the stock in his store at Spotswood, N. J., to the Astor Park store. This was before he gave the order for the delivery of the morphine, and was only one dram in the Spotswood store, some of the supplies went to the Spotswood store.

A comparison of the inventory of the stock in the store and the amount purchased in a line from the New York drug house, showed a slight discrepancy in the quantity of morphine on hand, but the witness could not explain it. He was positive, however, that Clerk Lettett never sold the quantity he alleges to have sold Helen Potts or anybody else without his knowledge.

After trying to refresh Van Nater's memory, Commissioner Raines asked:

"Did you know Miss Lettett?"

"No, sir. I believe I met her in 1890 at Ocean Grove. She was accompanied by a lady, and was pointed out to me. I never saw her afterwards."

Mr. Lettett brought out a conversation the witness and last Tuesday with Clerk Lettett. Van Nater met Lettett, and the latter said he was going to the Harris case. "You know Helen Potts is guilty of murder," remarked Van Nater. "Yes, I believe it," replied Lettett.

Mr. Howe then cross-examined Van Nater as to the date of the delivery of the morphine, and succeeded in getting him to admit that it was closed Oct. 15.

He knew his sister had made an affidavit in which she declared he had frequently been away from the Astor Park store, and it was untrue, as he had only been away on two occasions with the exception of the time he went to his home.

Henry D. Coleman, a resident of Astor Park, swore the general reputation of Clerk Lettett for honesty and integrity was bad. Ever since Lettett's affidavit was made many people remained to the witness that they did not believe him.

HAD TO FIGHT FOR HIS LIFE.

Desperate Encounter in a Standard Oil Telegraph Office.

Vreeland Attacked by Winters with Shotgun and Revolver.

NEWFOUNDLAND, N. J., April 29.—There was a sensation here this morning, caused by the story of a desperate encounter in the telegraph office of the Standard Oil Company at an early hour.

Fred Vreeland and Grant Winters have been the telegraphers in the office for years. They were fast friends, and Vreeland paid considerable attention to Winters' sister, Ada, an attractive girl of twenty.

Some time ago a disagreement between the two telegraphers resulted in a decided coolness, and then Winters objected to Vreeland continuing his attentions to Ada.

The Winters family sided with Grant. With the exception of Ada, the efforts to break up the friendship between the young people were unsuccessful, however.

This naturally served to widen the breach between the telegraphers, and the climax of their quarrel came at 1 o'clock this morning.

According to the stories told of the affair, when Winters went to relieve Vreeland at the telegraph office at 1 o'clock this morning, he at once opened fire at Vreeland with a shotgun.

Two shots were fired, the first shot tearing away Vreeland's coat-sleeve and lacerating the arm so badly that he was almost disabled.

The second shot missed Vreeland, and Winters then drew his revolver. Vreeland grappled with Winters, and in the struggle both fell to the floor.

Vreeland fell under Winters, but with the strength of desperation grasped both hands of his assailant and fought to prevent Winters shooting him again.

Four times Winters fired the revolver, but through Vreeland's efforts the bullets lodged in the walls and ceiling.

The reports of the revolver brought several people to Vreeland's assistance, and they pulled Winters away and sought to relieve Vreeland's injured arm.

While they were thus engaged Winters was still firing, and the bullets were hitting the walls and ceiling.

It is said that there was a horse and wagon waiting outside, with which Vreeland fled, and that there are hints that he had assistance.

The story was the talk of the town to-day, and it is said that Mr. Winters and her daughter have gone away to avoid the unpleasant notoriety accompanying the shooting.

Vreeland's injuries are not serious, and he will soon be able to resume his duties.

Where Mrs. Winters has gone could not be learned this morning.

BOTH IN CHICAGO.

GREAT CROWDS AT THE DEPOT.

The Liberty Bell Is to Have Its Formal Entry This Afternoon.

CHICAGO, April 29.—The gates of the World's Fair city were opened wide this morning to receive the advance guard of the distinguished visitors from far and near, who on Monday next will dignify by their presence the formal opening of the World's Columbian Exposition.

Appropriately enough, it was the dual descendant of a great discoverer that led the triumphal march of the nations of the earth. It is true that the Liberty Bell, that grand old remnant of the early days of the Republic, preceded in its arrival the coming of the representative of the Spanish nation by a few hours, but its formal entry into the city was deferred until this morning when the business of the day has far enough advanced to enable millions of people to be present.

Long before the hour scheduled for the arrival of the dual train at the Indiana-Illinois border the Reception Committee from this city was in waiting at Grand Crossing. They had gotten up with the lark, and 7 o'clock saw the special car flying toward the Pennsylvania Railroad to meet the incoming train.

In the party were W. W. Curtis, representing the Department of State; Senator E. DePuy de Lamoignon, Commissioner-General from Spain to the Exposition; Robert C. Chittenden, the Spanish Consul in this city, and President J. W. Palmer, representing respectively the national commission and the local directory, and one representative each of the Federal, State and city governments and the Citizens' Committee of Reception.

The second section of the Columbian express, to which the special car Ampton, in which the Liberty Bell was being transported, was attached, reached Grand Crossing shortly after 10 o'clock.

There was a story of a moment to enable the Reception Committee to get aboard and the train sped on towards Chicago.

The meeting between the World's Fair representatives and the Spanish train was most informal, the official welcome being reserved until the city was actually reached.

Boone, a carpenter, seventy-four years old, of 425 West Seventeenth street, died at New York Hospital at noon today from the effects of a dose of Paris Green.

He took the poison about midnight evidently for the purpose of hastening death, which a druggist had predicted would come to him to-day.

According to Mrs. Frank Miller, from whom Boone rented a room two weeks ago, he was attacked with pneumonia yesterday, and went to a drug store on Eighth avenue, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, and asked for some medicine.

The druggist examined the old man, and, so the suicide told a friend yesterday, said to him: "You won't live until 12 o'clock to-morrow."

Boone went to his bedroom and retired early last night. Mrs. Miller observed that he carried a small package in his hand. In the middle of the night, Boone was heard at intervals, but to all inquiries the old gentleman replied that he was all right.

About 11 o'clock he called on his wife, and had an ambulance summoned. A surgeon came from New York Hospital, and found Boone still alive, and the apartment in an erratic manner.

He was in his night clothes and his gray beard was profusely streaked with liquid Paris Green mixture.

Boone was removed to the hospital, where he later died in awful distress. For years the suicide was known about the city as a man who had been in the habit of carrying a small package in his hand.

A few months back he had not been able to work at his trade and got a job of a few days at the saloon at 427 West Seventeenth street.

The suicide, according to some friends, had been ailing for some time. Mrs. Frank Miller, of 310 West Twentieth street, a wealthy, retired grocer.

His wife, Mrs. Miller, and a daughter, Mrs. Teller, reside somewhere in Brooklyn.

STOLEN HORSE OFFERED FOR $60.

Thief Runs Across the Owner While Looking for a Reference.

FAR ROCKAWAY, April 29.—Robert McGord was arrested this morning by Officer Bechtel for stealing a horse and wagon from Henry Samson of Hempstead. The rig was taken out of Samson's stable last night.

McGord tried to sell it to W. Hinchman, of Inwood, for $60. The horse is valued at $200. Hinchman was suspicious when he heard the low price mentioned and demanded a reference.

McGord brought him to Far Rockaway to get one. Here they met Samson, who was looking for his horse and wagon, and McGord arrested.

McGord was arrested before Justice Smith, who is holding him for examination on Thursday next at 2 o'clock.

PARIS BEATS THE CAMPANIA.

At Her Dock in North River Before the Cunarder Is Sighted.

Many Distinguished Persons on Board the American Boat.

The ocean race which began from Liverpool and Southampton last Saturday between the new Cunarder, the Campania, and the American liner, Paris, was won to-day by the American vessel, which was seen at 3:40 o'clock this morning by the signalman at Sandy Hook abreast of the Lightship.

It was a race between the two largest and most powerful vessels now in the transatlantic service, and when the Paris was tied up to her dock in the North River the Campania was still east of Ireland, no doubt struggling along with stiff bearings and overheated machinery that is capable of developing 30,000 effective horse power.

The greatest interest was manifested in all quarters in the outcome of the contest, and the editorial and composing rooms, and by elevators from the eleventh floor.

At noon over a thousand people had gathered on the pier to see the Paris, and the crowd waiting to go up numbered nearly a hundred more.

The visitors were many foreigners, who had come to New York to see the naval review, and who are going to the World's Fair. They had seen the glided dome of the Pulitzer building on the way up the river, and were naturally anxious to view the city from the pier.
